

American Staff Band.

Major Anderson, who has had charge of the American Staff Band for upwards of eleven years, has relinquished his position on account of official duties, which takes him away frequently from New York.

The Major's services have been greatly appreciated and much valued.

He has toiled long, hard, and efficiently, and it is regretted that the circumstances are such that a change becomes necessary.

Deputy-Bandmaster Griffith is appointed as Major Anderson's successor, and has been received with many tokens of good will.

We predict for the Band growing efficiency and increased usefulness. (The Bandsman and Songster, May 18, 1907)

American Staff Band.

Major Fynn is the Leader of the American Staff Band, which number twenty players.

The latter has been attending a musical college for some eighteen months, and is determined that the extra knowledge acquired thereby shall be used in the service of The Army. (The Bandsman and Songster, June 1, 1907)